

Competence by leaderships in crisis situations

By Mathias Kunze

GRIN Verlag Apr 2008, 2008. Taschenbuch. Book Condition: Neu. 221x146x22 mm. This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Essay from the year 2008 in the subject Business economics - Business Management, Corporate Governance, grade: keine, , 24 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: Nowadays, company crises are the everyday life. The developments show that not only small but also medium-sized companies and even corporate groups are effected: breaches of company rules at Siemens and Volkswagen, SARS at Lufthansa or products recall at Haribo. These situations are not only big challenges for the management but also for the creditors and employees. Therefore the highest priority is to restore the competitiveness of the company. Usually, company crisis does not appear suddenly but there are already important warning signals in the forefront of the crises. If these warning signals are ignored and different determinants like the following of a conservative, centralistic and autocratic leadership, intransparency of production costs or a missing controlling system are cumulated, there is a danger for a crisis. An essential cause for company crisis is a bad qualification of the management in combination with missing problem solving competence within the deciding process of...
